

A Real Win-Win

Home2Fit gives housing associations, councils and private landlords the chance to match their vacant adapted properties to disabled people looking for a home by;

- saving housing providers lost rent by finding an occupant for an adapted home that becomes vacant
- reducing the costs of readapting or reinstating a property.
- positioning them as champions for disabled people in the new accessible Scotland

Accessing a home

If you are a disabled person you deserve the same home choices as anyone else – wherever you live in Scotland and whatever your access needs. So you should.

Now here's the good news.

Enter Home2Fit.org.uk an exciting new website to match what you want with what's available and make contact with housing providers who have accessible homes in your area of choice. It's that simple.

You click on Home2Fit.org.uk and search for a vacant home suited to your needs in your area. There are options for social and private rented homes and for home owners. Register now to make sure you are in as early as possible and ready to benefit from this brand new opportunity.

If a home to suit is not yet available housing providers can still see your request and respond to you.

Matching the right home for the right person – that's our aim.

Scotland the equal

Home2Fit is a real boon for disabled people in Scotland and the perfect start to making ours a country in which everyone can thrive.

It is backed fully by The Scottish Government, disability organisations, housing associations and local authorities from across Scotland.

Housing is key to independent living. Without a house to meet your needs it can be impossible to take part in life's opportunities, like education, employment or simply play a full part in family or community life.

Together, we will make sure that in Scotland you can enjoy life's full choices and achieve your ambitions – no matter who or where you are.
